

JUSTIN HOSBEY

Emory University

RACE, JUSTICE, AND THE
ECOLOGICAL LEGACY OF
THE PLANTATION IN SOUTHERN LOUISIANA

FEBRUARY 3

12:00PM EST/
5:00PM GMT

The humanitarian disaster triggered by Hurricane Katrina in 2005 exposed the racial violence and class domination that structures New Orleans and the broader U.S. South. This talk uses ethnography to explore the social impact of the privatization of public services in Southern Louisiana in the years since Katrina made landfall. With a particular focus on the quasi-privatization of public schools, this presentation analyzes how the politics of space, place, and class in Black New Orleans are being transformed.

Registration:
bit.ly/33bS1uy

Oxford Penn Toronto International Doctoral Cluster

